Western Sahara: UN responsibility over a Non Self-Governing Territory controlled by an Occupying Power*

Historical and legal background

In 1963, the UN General Assembly (UNGA) included Western Sahara in the list of Non Self-Governing Territories¹, to which UNGA Resolution 1514 (XXV) entitled “Declaration on the granting of Independence to colonial countries and peoples” applied.

On 16 October 1975, the International Court of Justice released an Advisory Opinion² stating, inter alia, that “The inferences to be drawn from the information before the Court... are in accord in not providing indications of the existence,... of any legal tie of territorial sovereignty between Western Sahara and the Moroccan State.”

On 6 November 1975, King Hassan II of Morocco, invaded Western Sahara militarily and brought thousands of Moroccan civilians into the Territory (Green march). On the same day, the UN Security Council (UNSC) adopted Resolution 380 declaring "Deplorable the realization of the Green March". The Security Council requested Morocco to withdraw immediately all the participants in the march from the territory of Western Sahara.

Subsequently, the UNGA³, while deeply deploring the continued occupation of Western Sahara, urged the Kingdom of Morocco to end the occupation of the Territory and recognized the Polisario Front as the legitimate representative of the people of Western Sahara. The UNGA reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Western Sahara to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.

Since then, the UNGA, in recalling the previous resolution when adopting a new one on the “Question of Western Sahara”, has repeatedly reaffirmed its interpretation of the legal status of the Territory and the inalienable right of the people of that Territory to self-determination and independence. It also consistently reaffirmed the interpretation of the legal status of the Occupying Power in Western Sahara.

The African Union and the occupation of Western Sahara

On 25 February 2015, the Sahrawi Arab Democratic Republic (SADR)⁴ requested a legal opinion from the Office of the Legal Counsel (OLC), which was modified on 3 April 2015 on the issue of “the legality in the context of international law, including the relevant UN resolutions and OUA/AU decisions, of actions allegedly taken by the Moroccan authorities or any other State, group of States, foreign companies or any other entity consisting in the exploration and/or exploitation of renewable and non-renewable natural resources or any other economic activities in Western Sahara.”

In its legal opinion⁵, the Office of the Legal Counsel (OLC) recalled that the Kingdom of Morocco invaded Western Sahara on the pretext of claiming the territory, disregarding a formal call from the UNSC to put an end to the declared march into Western Sahara⁶.

The OLC also recalled that, on 27 February 1976, the day after Spain notified the Secretary-General of its withdrawal as the Administering Power, the Polisario Front, unilaterally proclaimed the Saharawi Arab Democratic Republic, in response to the legal and administrative vacuum created by Spain unilaterally, when it withdrew from its colony without finishing the process of decolonization that the UN entrusted it with.

Furthermore, the OLC stressed that notwithstanding the membership of SADR to both OAU and AU, there is recognition that the people of Western Sahara are not fully liberated and that the SADR controls only a part of Western Sahara⁷. It also stressed that despite the fact that the Kingdom of Morocco occupies a large part of the territory of Western Sahara, it has never been recognized as an Administering Power of the territory pursuant to Article 73 of the UN Charter.

In its conclusions, the OLC emphasized that the Kingdom of Morocco is not an Administering Power over Western Sahara's territory under Article 73 of the UN Charter and that it also does not have sovereignty over Western Sahara.

The European Union Court of Justice and the occupation of Western Sahara

A. The Association and Liberalization agreement between the European Union (EU) and the Kingdom of Morocco

On 21 December 2016, the Grand Chamber of the Court of Justice of the European Union (CJEU) ruled that the Association and Liberalization agreement between the EU and the Kingdom of Morocco was not applicable to Western Sahara⁸.

Having considered that Western Sahara is listed by the UNGA as a Non Self-Governing Territory, the Court, in conformity with the provisions of the "Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations"⁹ observed that Western Sahara has a "separate and distinct status [...] in relation to that of any State, including the Kingdom of Morocco" (§ 92) that controls most of the territory of Western Sahara, where a wall of sand was constructed and guarded by the Moroccan army, separating it from the rest of the territory controlled by the Polisario Front (§ 37).

It is worth to recall that besides the above mentioned principle, the "separate and distinct status" of Western Sahara in relation to the Kingdom of Morocco also originates from the international borders that have been established a century ago¹⁰ and confirmed in an international agreement concluded by the Polisario Front and the Kingdom of Morocco in 1997¹¹.

After underlining that the Polisario Front was recognized by the UN as the legitimate representative of the Sahrawi people (§ 105), the CJEU found that the people of Western Sahara must give their prior, free and informed consent for any international agreement to be applicable to the territory of Western Sahara and its natural resources (§ 106).

⁷ The rest is occupied by the Kingdom of Morocco (footnote no.11 on page 3 of the OLC's Legal opinion)

⁹ A/RES/25/2625 (24 October 1970)

¹¹ The paragraph 3 of the Lisbon Compromise Agreement on Troop Confinement, concluded on 29 August 1997, reads as follows: "This compromise shall in no way change, alter or otherwise affect the internationally recognized boundaries of Western Sahara, and shall not serve as precedent for any argument that such boundaries have changed or been altered."

B. The Partnership Agreement between the EU and the Kingdom of Morocco in the fisheries sector

In his Opinion¹², delivered on 10 January 2018, the Advocate General of the CJUE asserts that the Fisheries Agreement is invalid.

The Advocate General states that the people of Western Sahara have been deprived of the opportunity to exercise the right to self-determination on the conditions set out by the United Nations General Assembly.

Since the assertion of Moroccan sovereignty over Western Sahara is a breach of the right of the people of Western Sahara to self-determination, the Advocate General concludes that the EU has failed to fulfil its obligation not to recognise the illegal situation resulting from the breach, by the Kingdom of Morocco, of the right of the people of Western Sahara to self-determination and also not to render aid or assistance in maintaining that situation.

The Advocate General also considers that the Kingdom of Morocco is the Occupying Power in Western Sahara and the manner in which the Fisheries Agreement was entered did not comply with the rules of International Humanitarian Law applicable to international agreements entered by an Occupying Power, regarding the occupied territory.

Applicability of International Humanitarian Law

As stressed by the AU's Office of the Legal Counsel, under the Convention IV with respect to the Laws and Customs of War on Land and its Annex, The Hague Convention of 1907, and other rules of international humanitarian law, the Occupying Power may not change the legal, institutional and political status of the occupied territory. This is because occupation is a temporary status and the Occupying Power should not introduce permanent changes in the occupied territory.

The longstanding Kingdom of Morocco's occupation of Western Sahara has led to a number of gross violations of human rights as well as serious and continuous violations of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949.

In particular, it is to be highlighted the violations of Articles 31 and 32 (prohibition of coercion, corporal punishment, torture, degrading and inhuman treatments); Article 33 (prohibition of collective penalties, intimidation, pillage, reprisals); Article 49 (prohibition of deportations, transfers, evacuations); Article 53 (prohibition of destruction of real or personal property belonging, individually or collectively, to private persons); and Article 76 (on the treatment of detainees). Some of these violations may amount to war crimes, crimes against humanity and cultural genocide.

Conclusion and recommendations

Western Sahara is the only Non Self-Governing Territory that does not have a recognized Administering Power reporting to the UN General Assembly in conformity with article 73 of the UN Charter. The great majority of the Territory has been under the Kingdom of Morocco's occupation for more than 40 years.

The undersigned organizations consider that the United Nations have the primary responsibility over Western Sahara and therefore call upon:

- the UN Human Rights Council to create the mandate of Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights violations in the Occupied Territory of Western Sahara;
- the UN High-Commissioner for Human Rights to resume, without delay, the technical missions to Western Sahara and the Sahrawi refugees' camps;
- the UN Secretary-General to report to the UN General Assembly in accordance with the modalities set for the Administering Powers by Article 73 of the UN Charter;
- the UN Security Council to include the monitoring of Human Rights in the mandate of the MINURSO¹³.

¹³ The UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara was created by the UN Security Council with the adoption, in April 1991, of resolution 690 which, by approving the UNSG's reports (S/21360 and S/22464), determinate that the referendum was to be held within 9 months.
